Woman's Board of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church.

155 FIFTH AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY.

To Presbyterian Young People.

DEAR FRIENDS :

SITKA is the pretty Russian name of the capital of Alaska, that vast possession of the United States that gives us a proprietorship in icebergs and reindeer, totems and a midnight sun.

Sitka also stands for the largest missionary investment in the Northland of that great stock company, the Presbyterian Church, and the young folks of the church make a fairly good array of shareholders in the enterprise, which at this point is the Sitka Presbyterian Industrial Training School for the Alaskans. You are invited to look into it.

A school was opened at Sitka in 1878, but it was not until 1882 that, a site being selected outside of the village and a building 100x50 feet erected, the boarding department for boys was opened and an eager company began to live "Boston way" as they expressed it—everything American being understood as pertaining to Boston. About this time a home for girls, which had been established at Fort Wrangel, was transferred to Sitka and a building 130x30 feet, similar to that for the boys, was built, and the two became the Sitka Industrial and Training School. Since that time other buildings have been grouped about these two; those for industrial training, the hospital and the model cottages.

The whole plant is a busy hive of industry. At the early morning roll call, the tasks are assigned: one division of boys goes to the school room, another to the shops and a third to outdoor duties. The girls' matron in the meantime is directing the girls to their several places in the school room, the sewing room, the kitchen or the laundry. Outdoors, if you pass down the beach, you will see the boys sawing wood, for about forty stoves must be supplied. In the industrial buildings are the carpenter, shoe and paint shops. In the hospital, the last building toward the east, we find the physician in his office, and the nurse attending the sick. There are in the wards not only pupils from the school but a number of the natives from the

MISSION BUILDINGS AT SITKA.

Indian village, for while this people seem to be a rather hardy race, there is much sickness among them, and the hospital is a necessary adjunct to the school. There the patients are brought under the most wholesome religious influences, and often those who could not be reached at any other time will listen gladly to the precious message of the gospel.

Christianizing and civilizing the boys and girls of Alaska, who are the hope of the country, is the object of all the work. Our missionaries tell us what these pupils are saved from. One says, "Our natives have some strange and cruel customs. Tribe is everything—the person and home nothing. The children belong to the mother's tribe, and the mother's brother has more to say about them than the father. If there were war between the father's and mother's tribes, the children would fight against their father. The uncle on the mother's side takes them away from their parents (especially the boys) when they are eight or ten years of age, and trains them to fish, hunt, etc., to supply his table with food, to cut and carry the wood, to cook the food and to keep the house warm. They also give him most of the money they obtain from their work. He is On Kow (chief). When he dies the oldest nephew is made to marry his widow, and he takes the house, goods, etc., and becomes On Kow, in his uncle's place. So it is not an uncommon sight to see a boy of twelve years living with an old woman of sixty. One of our Home boys, who is now an elder in our church, and owns a nicely furnished cottage, was rescued from such a fate when he was twelve years old.

"We had a man and his wife who had been bound up as witches. When released we hid them away from their accusers for three weeks; the man's wrists were worn to the bone where the ropes had been tied around them. The Indian doctor's power was absolute; what he said must be done at all hazards. He robbed the poor shamefully, taking their homes, blankets and other belongings away from them, leaving them perfectly destitute.

"When our boarding school was first started a dear little boy came to us in great haste one morning asking that we would take him into our home. He came a long distance, about eighty miles, and he had paddled his little canoe all night long, for he and his mother had been tied up as witches and left outdoors with a guard to watch them. While the guard slept the little boy succeeded in getting the ropes loose from his own hands and then went to his mother and released her. They secured a canoe, got into it and with all their might paddled as fast as they could until they reached Sitka. When he reached us he was so worn and afraid he could scarcely speak above a whisper. We fed and nursed him into a happy Christian boy, in spite of being handicapped with heathen instincts, and the inherent superstitions of a barbarous ancestry."

"Not infrequently girls have run away from home and sought refuge here to escape being forced into marriage solely for the pecuniary benefit of a bale or two of blankets (their basis of money value) given to her people by her would-be spouse. The parents are keen matchmakers, and the girl has no voice in the matter. Her parents and relatives make the contract in conformity with the tribal caste and custom."

We cannot tell all the story here, but this Sitka School is a Christian home in every sense of the word with religious training seven days in the week. Prof. Kelly, the Superintendent, with a noble band of co-missionaries, will welcome you as tourists if you go to Alaska; but even if you cannot see it for yourself, does it not commend itself to you as an investment worthy of the money you hold in trust for the Lord?

Faithfully yours,

WOMANS' BOARD OF HOME MISSIONS.
